

Molly Fisk

Molly Fisk

Award-winning poet Molly Fisk gives talks on creativity, the healing power of writing, women's uphill battle with the culture, and subjects that poets examine carefully but non-poets tend to avoid, like money, sex, body image, grief, jealousy, and death.

Molly will customize a talk for your group, and also offers interactive half- and full-day programs. She's spoken at Stanford and Harvard Universities, the Women's Health Leadership Conference, the Northern California Child Abuse Conference, Hospice of the Foothills, and Sierra Nevada Memorial Hospital.

I'm fairly certain that Molly Fisk could stand in front of one hundred people and read out of the phone book, and they would still come away renewed, refreshed, in high spirits about themselves and the world at large. Add to that skill a "meaty" subject like cultivating creativity in the trenches of day-to-day life, and you take home all of the above AND some juicy practical tools for more adventurous living. I thoroughly enjoyed myself.

Scientific studies show that certain kinds of writing boost the immune system. Molly outlines the current research and teaches her method of turning a list into a poem, an easy-to-learn technique that accomplishes this.

Curling Your Eyelashes Slows Down the Revolution

How women are diverted from their personal and political power by the culture, and how to get it back.

Using Your Turn Signal Promotes World Peace

Small things you can do to support your workplace, community, and planet.

Sex in Cars and Other Hot Topics

Some friendly talk about the subjects we don't talk about, like money, sex, grief, jealousy, and death.

Molly is the best coach on creativity that I have met. Her presentations are inspiring. Her stories are heart warming and her information about how to be more creative is invaluable.

When I need to know more about creativity, I go to Molly Fisk. Her presentation is so knowledgeable, organized, and engaging that she feels free to improvise, demonstrating creativity on the spot. There's no one I'd recommend more highly. — Jeff Kane M.D., Director, Psychosocial Education, Sierra Nevada Cancer Center, and author of: Be Sick Well, A Healthy Approach to Chronic Illness, and How to Heal

Thank you so much for bringing replenishment to our seriously depleted Hospice team. You inspired a depth of engagement as well as laughter and surprising insights in the hour you spent with us, and in doing so revived our capacity to respond to the challenges we face each day in caring for the dying.

— Jane Swan, Spiritual Care Coordinator, Hospice of the Foothills
